“Our role, working as an Advocate for either the attorney or the individual, is to make sure the client understands the financial implications of the divorce settlement, to ensure they make well-informed financial decisions and to move forward post-divorce with a sense of confidence and security.”

As a Certified Divorce Financial Analyst, Christian G. Koch CDFA™ specializes in:

- Analyzing and forecasting the long-term effects of a proposed initial settlement offer
- Tax consequences of dividing property – Pension plans, 401Ks, and health insurance coverage
- Determining your financial picture for the future

Working with a financial divorce expert can help preserve a family's finances by:

- Conducting a comprehensive assessment of the divorcing couple's finances
- Reviewing property to understand its cost basis, tax implications, and value, as well as how to divide it
- Dividing retirement accounts and pension funds
- Reviewing and revising beneficiary designations to make certain the client has named the intended beneficiary. Consider the beneficiary designation for all assets and insurance policies including life insurance, disability, transfer on death accounts, annuities, retirement and profit sharing accounts
- Determining whether the client should keep, sell, or refinance the house. Alternatively determine the pros and cons of holding onto the house as an investment property
- Analyzing from a financial perspective whether a spouse should receive alimony, how much he or she should receive, and for how long—and how the payout should be structured for the greatest benefit
- Strategizing to minimize taxes and decipher post-tax implications of the marital asset split
- Discussing health care insurance needs and continuation of coverage

“We address financial issues and project potential scenarios pertinent to your divorce, which your attorney may not be qualified to discuss.”
